Walid..

As the Hannan project approaches conclusion, I wanted to take a moment to thank you for originally inviting me to be involved with the project. And although none of us could ever have predicted at that time it would be over four years to reach this milestone it has truly been a pleasure to work with the entire project team.

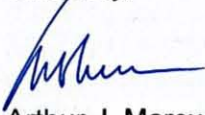

I must also compliment everyone involved on the extraordinary levels of craftsmanship of materials & the continuing project coordination throughout the project. From the tiled showers to making sure that all of the electrical panels would actually fit in the ever shrinking space of the Utility Room: it was the dedication of your team that made this happen.

We both certainly know from experience that the simpler and cleaner the lines in a project means that only the coordination of the general contractor is going to make this project look even better than its design. And that your team has certainly achieved here with the attention to detail so critical in a project of such high levels of design and materials.

And Berlin was truly inspirational in terms of the architecture and urban vision there. And thanks also for your urging me to see Tempelhof Airport.....There was even a certain beauty in the totalitarianism of it all..

Looking forward to working together again on projects in the future....

Sincerely,

Arthur J. Marcus AIA
